Possible ways I can think of to improve this first iteration:

1. Add a clock somewhere in both rooms that shows the actual local time of the user

2. Furniture and decoration:
    a. Both rooms (especially my dorm room, so much empty space on the top left) feel super bare and still have way too much space and don't feel "cozy"
    b. Optimally, we want to minimize as much floor space as possible while still having it be easy for the user to move around and interact with all items
        i. Ex. add a couch you can sit on in the dorm room
    c. On top of that, I also want to add a lot more decoration everywhere:
        i. Succulents, small houseplants, etc.
        ii. Posters on the wall (Kanye West Graduation, Kendrick Lamar DAMN, "Welcome to My Crib" duck poster (look for this online), etc.
        iii. Lighting: lamps, fairy lights, led strips, etc.
        iv. Add a pair of black headphones somewhere
        v. Miscellaneous things: stuffies?
    d. Generally speaking, just think about interior design principles and what makes bedrooms like nice, aesthetic, and cozy in real life, and implement that into the portfolio
        i. Can also make my room a bit messy (clothes just hanging and lying around, random stuff on desks, etc.) since I'm pretty messy in real life

3. Off the start, someone looking through my portfolio:
    a. Wouldn't know that the room they wake up in is my UCLA dorm room
    b. Wouldn't know that the door to the right can be walked through to access my home room
    c. To fix this, we need something that clearly shows the UCLA room is my dorm room. Some ideas:
        i. Dorm room:
            1. Window shows skyline of UCLA's royce hall
            2. One big UCLA pennant instead of multiple ones
            3. A UCLA stuffy bear somewhere (Bruin)
            4. A UCLA hoodie hanging somewhere or just on my bed
        ii. Bedroom:
            1. Stussy Toronto hoodie somewhere

4. Interactions:
    a. Press E to pet the cat, F to learn more
        i. Cat should meow when petted
        ii. Hearts are cute - also have the cat sit when petted and close eyes iii. Cat can also move onto the bed and sleep there curled up
    b. Press E to do pull-ups on the pull-up bar
    c. Press E to ride the longboard around the room

d. Press E to sit on a couch or bed

5. Items:

UCLA Dorm Room:

a. About me shouldn't be a mirror - not sure what else it could be, but it needs to be more prominent/obvious and preferably the first thing that somebody looks at + still very "representative of me"
b. Pennants should just be a big UCLA pennant instead - and showcase my current UCLA education
    i. Pin board should be like my "to-do" list (make that clear somehow) and represent all the student organizations I'm a part of instead of Hope for Hearing
    ii. Hope for Hearing should just be a white shirt with "hope for hearing" words on it on the bottom right drawer that can be interacted with
        1. On that note, the bottom right drawer can be a little bigger with more items on it
c. Grad cap is good, but make it just my high school education instead of UCLA + high school
d. For consulting + case competitions: remove the trophy and just have a binder that says "consulting stuff" or something
e. Marketing shouldn't be a camera - maybe my phone instead, with Instagram open
f. I'm thinking that this drawer in the top middle of my room can become a working desk instead, with my laptop, the binder, and a bunch of other non-interactable items that usually go on a dorm working desk

Home Room:

a. Remove acting completely, including the laptop/youtube item
b. Add a camera to the bottom right drawer in my home room - this is to showcase my love and hobby for photography
c. Make the nightstand's lamp and family photo frame more obvious that they are what they are (lamp should glow, family photo should have an outline of the image that eventually gets attached)
d. Shelf
    i. Top shelf trophy is good; move it to the left, add a blue and white striped oar to its right, remove the white sticks on that top shelf
    ii. Middle shelf: keep that for now, but when I upload the actual images of the plaques, they should look like those actual plaques
    iii. Bottom shelf: those don't really look like books, but rather huge binders. Just have four books there, with the spine of each reading: AOT, Lookism, Sweet Home, Solo Levelling
e. Make the baked treats a large apple crisp pie with a slice on a plate with a fork (so it's more obvious that it's "baking")

f. Replace the headphones with a big JBL speaker instead

Sprite:

- Sprite doesn't really look like me right now. Here are a few photos of me:

- Generally: curly-haired (shorter hair, permed, photo on the right is a bit too long), wearing a stussy shirt (maybe outfits can rotate or change by visiting my closet? This would be interesting), and asian
